Memory Palace is a game.

It is an invitation into the impossible.

It is an afternoon, if you make the time.

It is best solved together.

It holds more than it shows.

A solution is contained within.

It is never finished the same way twice.

It is solved the moment you stop trying to remember.

Open a drawer.

Find a match.

Ninety-three matches solve the puzzle.

Begin anywhere.

Mark Schoening is a multi-disciplinary artist working across painting, sculpture, digital fabrication, animation, generative coding, and 3D modeling. Employing multiple forms of digital design and fabrication, he combines systematic studio routines to produce ideas and collections built on variation. He received his BFA from Massachusetts College of Art & Design (2006) and his MFA in Painting from the University of Minnesota (2016).

His work has been exhibited nationally and internationally in Boston, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Dallas, Minneapolis, and Copenhagen, and is housed in numerous public, private, and institutional collections. He is a recipient of a Jerome Foundation grant in printmaking and served as a lecturer in the Art Department at the University of Minnesota from 2016-2024. He runs the Porch Gallery, a seasonal exhibition space in south Minneapolis.

Schoening's work has been featured in art fairs including Pulse NY, Pulse Miami, Berlin Liste, Art Copenhagen, and Dallas Art Fair, and has appeared in New American Paintings, Beautiful Decay, and Flaunt Magazine.

Recent solo exhibitions include Counting, Kiehle Gallery (2024); Single File, The Orange Advisory Presents (2023); Shapeshifter, Public Functionary (2016); and Bits and Bytes, Mirus Gallery (2015). Select group exhibitions include In Our Minds, Minnesota Museum of American Art; the DeCordova Annual, DeCordova Museum (2008); We Go Fast, Left Field Gallery; and New Neon, Bedford Gallery.
